

7 Signs Your Business Needs Outsourced IT

When your IT becomes a burden rather than a return on investment

64% of SMBs cite security breaches as their top concern

27% of SMBs struggle with budget constraints

18% of SMBs lack in-house resources to manage security

1 LACK OF TIME OR RESOURCES

Managing your technology is a huge job that requires a range of resources. A managed IT provider is solely focused on your IT—your success is their success.

2 SYSTEMS ARE OUTDATED

If you're running on old systems, your IT isn't as secure or reliable as it may have been five or ten years ago. An outsourced team can update your systems without requiring you to move to all new programs and processes.

3 CURRENT IT STAFF IS STRUGGLING

Your IT staff may be stretched too thin to perform to the best of their ability. Patching, troubleshooting, updating security, and more leaves little time for them to strategize and scale your growth.

4 TRENDS MOVE TOO QUICKLY

Technology moves at a lightning-fast pace. Outsourcing your IT partners you with a team that is constantly at the forefront of the latest and greatest technology trends.

7 LACK OF TECHNICAL EXPERTISE

Managing and maintaining IT systems is a complex task that requires specific expertise. If you don't have this in-house, it's often more efficient to outsource and get all the skills you need with the costs of a large in-house team.

5 SECURITY THREATS AND COMPLIANCE ISSUES

If you're not up to date on compliance, you're at risk. Security threats are evolving every day. A security-focused IT provider will know how to protect you while staying compliant with industry standards.

6 SINKING TOO MUCH MONEY INTO IT

Outsourcing your IT can be more affordable than hiring in-house staff, and it frees up valuable capital that you can reinvest into your business.

If any of these signs sound familiar, it might be time to consider outsourcing your IT. By partnering with Fusion Managed IT, you can enjoy all the benefits of having a reliable and secure IT infrastructure without the hassle and expense of managing it yourself.
